ArkSHA 2020 Awards
As we approach the holiday season, I am reminded of growing up and celebrating Christmas with my family. I always had a pretty long Christmas wish list. The older that I have gotten, the shorter that the list has become AND the list has included fewer material possessions. This year I was thinking about what is on my “wish list” professionally. I thought I would share it because it involves you - my audiologist and speech-language pathologist friends. Stick with me here...

Needless to say, as an audiologist, I think hearing is an incredibly important sense. I have truly come to appreciate the various “seasons” of hearing. By this I mean, I have come to appreciate that hearing sensitivity in infancy and early childhood is extremely important from the language development perspective. In school-age children, hearing sensitivity is extremely important from the learning perspective. During the teen years and young adulthood, hearing sensitivity is extremely important from a socialization perspective. Then in adulthood through our “golden years,” hearing sensitivity is so very important for maintaining cognitive function and connectivity. So, keeping these stages of life in mind, it is my grownup Christmas wish that whenever we professionals in speech, language, and hearing are evaluating a person’s communication abilities, we always consider the hearing abilities and auditory functions of that person. If a child’s language abilities are being evaluated, or if an octogenarian’s swallowing and cognition are being assessed, my wish is that the professional seeing that person thinks, “I wonder how well my client is hearing what I’m saying,” and then says, “I should perform a quick hearing screening to ensure my client is capable of participating in this evaluation as well as possible.”

Also, on my grown-up Christmas wish list is the desire to see these same professionals consider the communication abilities of our patients who may have perfectly normal or typical hearing sensitivity. We all need to remember that we see clients of all ages who may struggle with communication capabilities as a result of a neurogenic disorder, genetic syndrome, or traumatic injury. We are speech, language, AND hearing professionals, so my wish is that we all always consider the other perspective and continue to value the other senses involved in this important world of communication.

ArkSHA Charitable Fund

In December of 2019, the ArkSHA board started the ‘ArkSHA Charitable Fund’ with the Arkansas Community Foundation to provide our members and supporters with a tax-deductible way to support ArkSHA’s initiatives. This will allow ArkSHA to provide funds for educational/research purposes to a selected 501(c)3 as requested and the board sees fit.

Professional

Kelsey Sutton, MS, CCC-SLP

Kelsey Sutton deserves a big virtual high five! With very little notice, she shifted to full-time teletherapist this year and has excelled in every way! Kelsey has not only worked tirelessly to meet the needs of a full caseload of virtual students, she has supported our entire department this school year. Kelsey can be counted on to mentor other SLPs with teletherapy and technology questions, provide resources to others, and tackle the complex communication needs of her students through creative and innovative means. Rogers Public Schools appreciates Kelsey’s contributions!

Student

Braxton Barber

-Graduate student at the University of Central Arkansas

Braxton is a first-year graduate student at UCA, where he completed his undergraduate degree. Braxton has always been an excellent student, well respected and liked by both faculty and fellow students. Braxton experienced a significant loss this past year, yet showed his maturity in how he handled this life-changing event. He navigated his many responsibilities honestly and professionally, in a way that most students would not have been able to manage. Just this past month, Braxton, with the help of his father’s business, Southern Tees, created a UCA CSD merchandising page to allow supporters of UCA CSD to purchase apparel, cups, etc. In addition, they are donating a portion of the proceeds back to the department to be earmarked for student needs such as travel to conferences to disseminate research. His generosity will help CSD students for years to come. Braxton graduated from Vilonia High School in Vilonia, Arkansas. He enjoys being outdoors, hunting, and spending time with his beautiful new wife, Mindy. The faculty in UCA CSD know Braxton will be a difference-maker in our field; he already is here at UCA.
